JULY 2025

“When will Jesus come back? When will the end be?”

These questions get thrown around a lot and seem to constantly come up in the hearts of many who seek to follow in faith. For instance, even the first disciples asked Jesus when he would return, and later the Apostle Paul seemed to have a belief that the end would be soon. While this question is common, sadly it has also led to much awful and abusive theology and terrible care for neighbors and the world. Regardless of how concerned or interested one might be about this, it may be worthwhile to have a little understanding of how it gets answered.

First, let's simply note that so far, every single person who has ever predicted the end of the world has been wrong. Perhaps that goes without saying, but there have been countless people over the centuries who have attempted. Even some of the most faithful have been led astray on this topic, perhaps most notably the Apostle Paul who expected Christ's return and the end of things in his own life in the 1st century c.e.

Second, Jesus blatantly tells people not to concern themselves with the timing. The Gospels of Matthew and Mark contain the same word-for-word answer of Jesus to the disciples, “But about that day and hour no one knows, neither the angels in heaven nor the Son, but only the Father.” (Mt 24:36; Mk 13:32) And in the book of Acts, written by the same author as the Gospel of Luke, Jesus says it even more forcefully, “It is not for you to know the times or periods!” (Acts 1:7) In other words, every time Jesus was asked, he said (I'm paraphrasing here), “It ain't your business!”

Third, and sadly, attempts at making it our business often have the effect of instilling fear and committing terrible spiritual abuse to people's faith. Additionally, predictions often seem to contain a purpose and mission of the predictors gaining worldly power and wealth. We see this at play currently in the theological and social tenets of so-called “Christian” Nationalism, which has the effect of turning faith in a suffering and crucified prince of peace who gives life for all, into a triumphalist, exclusive, power-laden, and often violence-driven objective of fealty to a particular ideology and worldly dominance and conquering. Nothing could be much further from the story of grace and new life and the “down-to-earth” message of love and redemption held in the story of Christ.

So what do we do with this?

Well, Jesus said to “be prepared” and “stay awake”. What does this mean? I happen to think that it means, remain faithful. Remember and continue to tell the story of God's love. Continue to strive to love the Lord your God with all you heart, soul, mind, and strength, and your neighbor as yourself, and receive forgiveness and new life each day you fail. And in the face of those who say, “Be afraid!” Continue to hear the voice of so many angels proclaiming, “Do not fear.”

Martin Luther was famously asked what he would do if he knew the world would end tomorrow, and his answer was, “I'd plant a tree.”

In other words, continue to live in hope. That's bold and perhaps even radical these days. We might see it as even more powerful than all of the other voices clamoring for dominance and wealth.

One more thing, although we still await the end and cannot nor should not make it our business, Jesus still gave us promise of his presence in the meantime. He said things like, "For where two or three are gathered in my name, I am there among them," (Matthew 18:20) and, "I am with you always, to the end of the age." (Matthew 28:20) He even gave a reminder and remembrance and promise in his word which we take right here and now as he shows up among us in the sacrament of Holy Communion. "This is my body, given for you. This is my blood, shed for you."

So when is Jesus coming back? Well, every time we gather, each time we proclaim God's promises, and in the bread and wine given and shed to taste and see and even become God's presence with one another in faith.

Until the end, whenever it may be, we live and act in hope!

Pastor Charlie Ruud

P.S. Speaking of living and acting in hope...

Keep August 10th in your hopeful prayers as we gather with other South Minneapolis and Richfield area ELCA churches for a joint outdoor worship 10am at Veteran's Park in Richfield.

Also, keep the future of the church and Creative Early Learning Center playground in prayer and mind for seeds of generosity which may be planted in yourself and others in anticipation of funding new replacement structures of those which were destroyed in the bus accident which may make the playground even more fruitful for the children and center. Look for more info and opportunity to give toward this in the coming months.

Nursing Notes
 Got a Case of the Summer Bl

May is a time many Nurses get caught up on Continuing Ed Credits for every other year licensure. I attended many but one was about inflammation of the body and it's role in Summer Blues. Mouthful huh?. Most of us no matter our age look forward to outdoor activities, sports participating or watching, and family time and if lucky at a family cabin or resort visit. What in any of that could make us angry or depressed or physically inflame the body. More than you think. Planning, packing extra, cooking, wardrobe buying, family dynamics when people are in your space and making demands on you. Maybe it is the opposite. No family around, financially challenged, sleep deprived with longer days and THE HEAT AND HUMIDITY. WHEW. For some folks it draws them into isolation, they don't feel joy. It's hard to be out and about.

There are things to help.

1. Don't change your sleep routine. If 11 months of the year you go to bed after the 10pm news. Don't change it into late night friend or family events.
2. Set boundaries. On yourself and friends and family. Know your limits and stick with them. There will always that enabler who pushes you to do more, try more, etc.
3. Stay hydrated and nourished. Carry water bottles with cold water. Physically sit to drink it. Be intentional...concentrate on enjoying the cool water.
4. Wear comfort. Vacation is not the time to break in new shoes, Bring favorite clothes that have that favorite linens smell. This is especially good when family challenges increase stress levels.
5. Vitamin D is healing and 15 minutes is a good amount of time but wear sunscreen...also wear sun screen lip balm as the Ozone layer continues to peel away. Protect tender skin from future skin cancer effects.

There are other more person specific things to think about to cut Summer blues. But as you make your own plan remember to ask yourself is this going to make me feel good about me .

Pastor and I are coming to you to share some increased activity by scammers and specifically elder scammers that has come to light.

Pastor shared the following with me:

"A few members have noted recently that they have received communications - either text messages or emails from accounts which indicate they are from me as Pastor or the church but have turned out to be from scammers looking to exploit people for money. Sadly, this is not unique to our community. Each of the churches I have recently served encountered this deceitful activity routinely. Unfortunately scammers have multiple ways to gather information and connections and they often target elder adults."

I would share that I too got an email from what appeared to be from Pastor Charlie. The note said that he needed to discuss something immediately and I needed to reach out immediately. IT WAS A SCAM! Fortunately I had some clues. The email was from Pastor Charlie but my emails from him always says his last name too. I have become familiar with the way Pastor addresses me and how he words things so I know he wouldn't leave me to just "reach out immediately" ...He gives me details and often when best for me to reach out.

I reached out to several resources. The best by far are the FBI website and AARP website. There are videos, checklists AND helpful other contacts. In 2023 alone 3.4 Billion dollars were lost to scammers in US by seniors.

Here is a list of some of the most common scams

- 1) Family member in financial jam. Usually in foreign country on holiday who is in jail or had all their luggage stolen etc.
- 2) Romance Scam very online senior dating issue. They have every excuse why they need money wired immediately...They promise to pay it back!
- 3) Tech support - reporting computer or phone issue and they will fix it on the phone or computer if you send payment ...charge it on you credit card or even PayPal first.
- 4) Threats of legal action on very official looking law practice letter..bills. taxes, even the EZ pass lane fee.
- 5) Home repair service ...usually email or text who want full payment up front
- 6) TV and social media ads..reverse mortgage firms, debt reconciliation companies AND MANY MANY MORE!

My Dad used to tell young Robbi. If it looks or sounds like it is too good to be true RUN!

A final word from Pastor, "You should know that neither I or any member of the church staff would ever look to solicit money or services from you in this way. We have other avenues and resources to meet immediate needs."

All this being said if you should ever receive a suspicious or atypical message from any of us at the church, reach out and make us aware. We are there for you!

Summer is off to a great start in our Childcare!

With school-age children back full-time, there's renewed energy in the center. The children have been enjoying sunny walks to the park, splashing around at the local pool or on the grassy areas on our property, and grabbing ice cream to cool off. It's been wonderful to see everyone out and about, making the most of the warm days and reconnecting with the neighborhood. We have a lot more summer fun ahead!
